Dante is an associate in the Corporate group of our Montréal office.

His practice focuses on mergers and acquisitions and corporate governance. Dante works with entrepreneurs, private companies, investors, and emerging and high-growth companies, advising them on a wide range of transactional and commercial matters.

With significant experience in the manufacturing and supply chain sectors, he brings valuable insight into procurement, commercial agreements, as well as operational and regulatory matters. His engineering background further enhances his ability to understand technical processes and day-to-day operations, allowing him to deliver legal advice tailored to the specific realities of each industry.

Recognized for his practical, business-focused mindset, Dante helps clients make strategic decisions, mitigate risks, and carry out transactions effectively. He offers straightforward, value-driven guidance that aligns with their business goals.

Prior to joining Osler, Dante was an associate at a boutique business law firm in Montréal.
